Machine Learning Fundamentals

Machine learning is a subset of artificial intelligence that enables computers to learn without being explicitly programmed. It uses algorithms to identify patterns in data and make predictions.

Key concepts include supervised learning, unsupervised learning, and reinforcement learning. Common algorithms include neural networks, decision trees, and support vector machines.